

Canasil Resources (CLZ-TSXV)

The following editorial is extracted from the May 2010-1 issue

Canasil Resources (CLZ-TSXV; C$0.09) is about to start drilling on one of its Mexican gold-silver exploration projects, with other work underway that will lead to more drilling. The company has nine exploration properties in Mexico and four in British Columbia, all of which have had enough work conducted on them to show some merit. At the Sandra-Escobar gold-silver project in Durango State, surface mapping and sampling outlined a zone of anomalous gold and silver, which has led to the definition of a number of drill targets. At the Esperanza silver-lead-zinc project in Zacatecas, the upgrading of access roads has been completed and surface exploration work is underway. The company is pursuing a joint venture partner to help fund exploration work at Esperanza.

Drill targets have also been outlined at the Salamandra silver-zinc, Vizcaino gold-silver and Carina silver-gold projects located along a trend from Durango to Zacatecas States.

Drilling is planned once funding is secured and/or joint venture partners are brought in. The company is now raising $300,000 in a private placement at $0.10 to initiate work. The company has good projects and a strong geological group. Seeing work underway on its Mexican projects should begin to attract investor interest. Success in the drilling could have a big impact on the value.
